—Lawrence Barrett is at rest for the summer.
—Miss Fannie Marsh will return to the stage next season.
—Mrs. Sol Smith Russell will spend the summer in "Gotham."
—Emilie Melville has returned to her first love, Australia.
—Helen Blythe has a new play entitled: "Leah, the Forsaken."
—Bertha Welby has written a song which will soon be published.
—Charlie Wing is looking up attractions for the new Topeka opera house.
—John T. Raymond has taken his family to Long Branch for the summer.
—Jennie Yeamans will not play with Boland Reed in "Cheek" next season.
—Edith Murilla is engaged with Daly's Passing Regiment company, next season.
—Florence Herbert closed her season last week. Her self and husband are in Chicago.
—Miss Laura Dow will produce her new play, "Daughter of a Noble," next season.
—Celia Logan will lecture during the coming season on the history and art of the stage.
—Manager J. H. McVicker and wife will sail for Europe July 10 to remain abroad three months.
—Alfred Kline has been engaged to play Sammie Green in "Only a Farmer's Daughter," next season.
—Helen Dungenon will sing with D'Oyley Carter the coming season. She is in San Francisco at present.
—The body of George A. Conly, the baby who drowned in Lake Spoford, Vermont, has been found.
—Fran Gallmeyer, the famous Vienna comedienne, will make a starring tour in America next season.
—C. B. Bishop will start next season in a new play, written by A. C. Turfiter, entitled "Strictly Business."
—Catherine Lewis sailed for England recently. She goes abroad to secure new operas for her starring tour next season.
—Mrs. Agnes Beall has recovered from a trying spell of sickness and is now at her summer home, Manchester-by-the-Sea.

—"Cad, the Tomboy," is the name of the new piece written by Leonard Grover, in which Miss Swan will star next season.
—Mr. F. W. Welch of Columbus, Ohio, correspondent for the New York Dramatic News, has written a new play called "Judge Slasher."
—Mr. Rice, composer of "Evangeline," and who can neither write nor read music, is at work on a new American opera. He whistles the air to a musical amanuensis.
—Eliza Weathersby plays a boy's part in the "Black Flag," to be produced this year by E. F. Thorne and Nat Goodwin. Mrs. Thorne (Jennie Murdoch) will also play a part in it.
—Fred Marsden, the author, has gone to his summer home at Schron lake, N. Y., whereas he says he will back in the sunshine fishing for trout. As a basket and fisher Marsden is a success.
—Frank Mayo will return to "Davy Crockett" next year. He expended a fortune in the effort to make himself a popular star in the "legitimate" last season, and will not repeat the endeavor.
—John T. Raymond's new three act comedy, entitled "The Solid Stocking," promises to be a grand success. It was written by Howard F. Taylor, and was accepted by Raymond immediately after its first reading.
—That Mrs. Langtry, the "Jersey Lily," contemplates an American tour is made evident by the fact that Mr. Thomas A. Hall, the Philadelphia manager, is applying for dates for her in New York. —Boston Herald.

—America will be overrun next season by new plays that is if we judge from the amount of first class artists in the United States, but what have a play just written for them.
—Mr. John J. Gilbert, formerly a reporter in Brooklyn and Philadelphia, has been engaged to take place of the late Mr. Conly in the "Eva Abbott" opera company. Mr. Gilbert is an amateur who is said to possess excellent vocal abilities.
—A new play has been written for John T. Raymond by J. Brander Matthews, well known as an interesting writer upon the French drama, and H. C. Bunner, the editor of Puck. Their play is founded upon plots derived from Melinae and Halcyon and Sardan.

—The Hamlet brothers will produce late next season a "grand" old English pantomime, which, it is thought, will surpass anything of the kind ever witnessed in America. It has been in preparation for the past three months, and will occupy at least six months longer before it is ready.
—The Wall, the doorkeeper of the Germania theatre, N. Y. City, a few nights ago saw one of the fan-blossoms pick up a trinket and put it in his pocket. The next day a lady called at the theatre and informed Mr. Wall of the loss of a very valuable diamond bracelet. He requested her to call in the evening. She did, and Mr. Wall who had recovered it, gave it to the lady. The next day he received a beautiful meerschaum pipe, in the box of which was a $20 bill, also a letter in which was enclosed $40 to be distributed among the boys.

—A Valuable Addition.
Because it is beneficial to the scalp and adds to personal beauty by restoring color and lustre to gray and faded hair, is why Parker's Hair Balsam is such a popular dressing.

—A large stock of Japanese and Chinese lanterns just received. Easton & Derruth.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.
Whereas, Martin L. Heck and Mary A. Heck, his wife, by their written deed of trust, dated the 20th day of October, 1871, and recorded in the recorder's office, in Pettis county, Missouri, in book (7) seven, page 32, conveyed to Dr. House, trustee, the following described real estate, to-wit: Seventy acres to be taken off of north end of the west half of the northeast quarter of section fifteen (15), in township forty-four (44), range twenty-two (22), in Pettis county, Missouri, a trust to secure two promissory notes in said deed described and whereas, one of said notes is due and unpaid, and whereas, the said Dr. House, trustee, is dead; now, therefore, at the request of the legal owner of said note and in accordance with the terms of said deed, notice is hereby given that I will, on SATURDAY, THE 29th DAY OF JULY, 1882, between the hours of 9 o'clock a. m. and 5 o'clock p. m. of that day, at the court house door, in the city of Sedalia, Pettis county, Missouri, proceed to sell said real estate to the highest and best bidder for cash, to pay said note and interest and cost of executing this trust.

FLEA BITES.

COME, LET US ALL SCRATCH.

—Miss Gypsey Ramsey is on the sick list.—Jeffersonville, (Ind.) Times.
—Don't wonder at it. That name would make a Missouri girl anticipate death and go crawling in her winding sheet.

—Conductor Bush has moved on Court avenue.—Jeffersonville, (Ind.) Times.
—That item would not do in a Sedalia Paper because the streets here are all "court" streets Sunday night.

—Miss Dora Smallwood, of Chicago, Ill., is in the city the guest of Miss Emma Rosewood.—Jeffersonville, (Ind.) Times.

—Mr. Hardwood is respectfully invited to call and see if the young ladies would change their kind of wood.

—A Philadelphia young woman who in deep mourning complains bitterly of the brilliant hue of the postage stamps which she is obliged to put upon her heavily bordered envelopes.—Ex.

—She probably makes the garments, which it is known at least one society belle of Sedalia wears, of deep black.

—Another scandal brewing.—Parsons Sun.
—Give it light as soon as the fruit is ripe. That is the way to settle them surely and certain.

—A printer at Decatur, Illinois, went to Missouri and married a banker's daughter.—Ex.

—Lookout for reports in eastern radical papers about another bold crime in the robber state.

—"No man shall kiss me except my future husband," she said, as he was about leaving her at the gate. "Suppose I agree to be your future?"
—"Why, then I'll agree to kiss you," she said, eagerly, and she did.

—Her mother was informed that he had proposed, and the old lady called round next day to fasten matters, and before he knew it he was eternally locked. It was a mean advantage, but a bid in the hand is worth two in the count gate.

WHEN YOUR MOTHER SEES.

—One day Billy and Sammy were playing in a mud-hole and Bill said:
—"Now, Sammy, let's play we was a barnyard. You be the pig, and I'll be the wailer, and I'll be a ball and better like everything."

—So they got down on their hands and knees, and Sammy went into the dirt and wallowed, while Billy yelled like distant thunder. By-and-by Sammy came up muddy, you never saw such a muddy little fellow—and he said:
—"Now, Billy, let's be the pig, and let me be the wailer."

—But Billy said: "I ain't a very good pig, except for dinner, and it'll be me mud for you to be a wailer when your mother sees you close."

HOTEL LIFE.

Mrs. Beall Draws a Revolver on Mr. Joseph Laurie.

A Curious Episode in Barnum's Hotel—Insult, Pistol, Apology and No One Hurt—A Dramatic Scene.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Lawyers are not in the habit of getting into trouble. As a class they are expected to be sufficiently informed to at least keep themselves out of difficulty, as otherwise they cannot assist others. Once in a long while, however, a dignified attorney manages to get on the trout hook, and on such occasions his writings are similar to those of the vulgar herd.

Col. Joseph S. Laurie is the lawyer now carrying a bundle that would have made Bunyan stand astounded. He does not appear to be greatly alarmed about the result, but possibly he is not aware of the precipice to which he clings. The trouble—as is customary with lawyers' troubles—involves a lady, who will have the direst sort of vengeance upon Mr. Laurie. The lady is Mrs. P. R. Beall, whose husband is a commercial traveler for a New York clothing house, and is absent from the city about six months in the year. Mr. and Mrs. Beall and Mr. and Mrs. Laurie occupy elegant apartments at Barnum's hotel, where the ladies appeared to be fond of each other's society, to which the gentlemen were never admitted. Mrs. Laurie is represented as a perfect lady, modest in her demeanor and unsparring in her charities. She had a great fondness for Mrs. Beall, whose loneliness she contemplated and sympathized with. It was Col. Laurie who made all the difficulty.

It was rumored that Mr. Laurie had insulted Mrs. Beall on Sunday, and that last Monday Mr. Laurie accosted the lady as she was coming down the stairs to the dining room for the purpose, it is alleged, of apologizing, when Mrs. Beall drew a revolver and leveled it at the attorney's head, causing consternation in the hotel. She did not shoot, however, but her wrath was temporarily placated by the inmates.

This morning a reporter of the Post-Dispatch called upon Mrs. Beall, at Barnum's hotel, and requested her statement of the trouble. After waiting a few minutes in the ladies' parlor, the reporter was greeted by Mrs. Beall, who seemed to be very anxious to avoid the interview. She is a very pleasant appearing woman, with dark hair, blue eyes, and a fair complexion. She was dressed this morning in a walking suit of black silk, shirred and puffed exquisite, and adorned with a white lace collar. Without accepting a chair, Mrs. Beall gazed sternly at the reporter and inquired:
—"Well sir?"
—He called, Mrs. Beall, to ascertain the nature of the difficulty between yourself and Mr. Laurie?"
—That is a matter I have reserved entirely for my husband, who will settle whatever difficulty I may have had."
—But what if Col. Laurie has made a statement?"
—He had better make a correct statement, or he will have more trouble."
—It is alleged that he grossly insulted you?"
—"I only came down to let you understand that I was not afraid of a reporter, but the facts in the case are known to Col.

Pratt, who is better able to repeat them. They are not worthy of repetition by a lady."

"The statement had best come from you direct."

"Well, then, on Sunday last I was walking down Fourth street, watching for a car to Bellefontaine cemetery. Presently I felt somebody place a cane against my back and familiarly address me. I turned and saw Mr. Laurie. 'Hello,' he said, 'where are you going?' 'I am going to Bellefontaine,' said I. 'So am I,' he coolly said, 'and it is rather fortunate that we go together.' Then I looked at him closely to discover whether he was in earnest, and he leered at me in such manner as to leave no doubt of his purposes. 'If you go, Mr. Laurie,' said I, 'then I shall not go, because I do not intend that you shall accompany me.' By this time I had hailed a car and got on board in order to possibly have carried me to Bellefontaine, and my sole desire was to escape his presence. To my surprise and astonishment he followed me on the car and sat down beside me. Mr. Laurie sat composedly for a few moments and I turned back upon him definitely, in order to indicate that his presence was particularly distasteful. Presently he said: 'This car does not go to Bellefontaine cemetery.' 'No,' said I, 'I have changed my mind, and am now going to Hyde Park.' 'That suits me as well,' he responded, 'for I am going to Hyde Park myself.' This was a turn, had not anticipated, but promptly I noticed him that he must not speak to me again upon any subject. He evidently regarded my indignation as feigned, for he persisted in his remarks to me until at last he addressed me in the most insulting manner."

"What did he say?"
—"I decline to answer that question to anybody except my husband. He said enough to make me leave the car instantly and return to the hotel."

"Did you see him again?"
—"Yes. At breakfast yesterday morning he waited for me at the dining room door and again attempted to address me, but I resented it in a more forcible manner."

"It is alleged that you drew a revolver upon him?"
—"The remainder of the narrative may be related by Col. Pratt. I refuse to say anything more."

Thereupon Mrs. Beall made a hasty exit from the parlor, leaving the reporter to the tender mercies of Col. Pratt, who said he did not know whether any pistol was drawn, although several of the hotel attaches declared that Col. Laurie was repelled at the point of a revolver. Col. Pratt said that Mrs. Beall and Col. Laurie had both related the story to him and that they agreed upon the facts, but the latter claimed he was joking and had no designs upon Mrs. Beall. The insulting remark alleged to have been made to Mrs. Beall could not be obtained, and nobody seems to know the character of the insult. It is evident, however, that the remarks were of a very distressing nature, for Mrs. Beall is highly indignant and almost hysterical in her references to Col. Laurie's conduct. Mrs. Beall is a native of Kentucky, and Col. Pratt declares that both Mrs. Beall and Mrs. Laurie are perfect ladies, both in character and conversation. He says that Col. Laurie claims he addressed Mrs. Beall in the hotel for the single purpose of making a proper apology.

Everybody cognizant of the facts awaits the return of Mr. Beall with considerable anxiety, as he is known to be a brave, excitable man, perfectly devoted to his wife and fully capable of redressing her wrongs.

FAITH'S SWEETNESS.

BY ROSA PEARLE.

There comes a time in every human life
Sad moments, when we long to hear
Some kindly words from lips where love is life;
Some tender words that will the spirit cheer.

We tire of strife and constant worldly din,
And turn our thoughts to some sweet spot afar,
Where peace and trust have made their home within,
And sorrow's discord can no longer mar.

We see the little child at drowsy even time,
Heedlessly clasped unto the mother's breast,
And listening as she coo some lullaby in rhyme,
Half yielding to envy of the babe thus blest.

And yet, we know that these are earth's desires,
And finite treasures were they made our own,
A covenant of straw to which the heart aspires,
But I have no comfort when its grant has flown.

But if these longings, which in vain come back
And, pitying self, still haunt us with their plan,
Could turn to where God's love, unknown lack,
Unfathomable still by any gauge of man.

No matter how the pathway might be paved,
With shapely thorns to pierce unheeding feet,
Life's trifling wants no longer would be craved,
For faith's glad sweetness would our joys complete.

SEDALIA.

And now society, weary of the dull routine of home life, seeks recreation in some one of the numerous resorts where a silver waterfall, a grand marine, or lake view, a healing spring, or lofty mountain altitude, has given more than local notoriety.

One may safely say "seek recreation," for surely no such thing as rest is to be found, where rooms are small and heated to such a degree that the only wonder is, that the occupants escape an actual grilling. Nor is there rest where Fashion, as inexorable as a Median law, issues a dictum which makes a change of apparel necessary five times per day. Does it not seem strange to the major part of humanity, that the society ladies who frequent these resorts, do not rebel against this needless dressing and with the independence which usually characterizes their sex, don something particularly adapted to comfort and wear it irrespective of Mrs. Grundy's opinion? One need not entirely sacrifice beauty for the sake of comfort either, for while not all things beautiful in the way of garments are comfortable, yet comfortable garments may be made beautiful. Cool lawn, chambray and ginghams may be tastefully and prettily made and give the wearer a look vastly superior to that which is theirs when sweltering in rhabdum satins, or gros grain silks. In this particular, one may see the difference between the representatives of the masculine and feminine gender. There isn't a man—mind I say man, not a coxcomb—in the universe who would change his attire five times per day, not even though his reward were ten times greater than that offered to a woman; for after all the woman only earns the satisfaction of displaying her abundant wardrobe and by it sacrifices all things pertaining to comfort and ease.

"Violin solo," A. L. Birchfield.

"Declamation," F. C. Mason.

Chorus, by the choir.

Budget, Carrie Crowley.

Visitors can pass a pleasant evening with this society.

JOINED IN JUNE.

Among the most pleasant and notable events of the season, was the marriage of Miss Della Kuykendall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Kuykendall, and Mr. J. K. Elkins, a prominent and successful young mechanic, of this city. The wedding took place last Thursday evening in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, probably sixty guests in all.

At precisely 8 o'clock the bride and groom, with their attendants, entered the beautifully decorated parlor, and there, in the midst of loving friends, lights and the sweet perfume of flowers, took upon themselves the vows which constituted them one for time and eternity. The Rev. A. H. Stephens, of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony, and in response to a question put to the bridegroom as to what he "would give to the bride as a pledge of his fidelity," he very appropriately and fittingly presented her with an elegant copy of the scriptures, bound in Russian leather.

The first bridesmaid, Miss Clara Ford was accompanied by Mr. W. B. Hancock.

The second bridesmaid, Miss Fannie Hoss, was accompanied by Mr. Will A. Young.

The bride was beautifully attired in a costume composed of white dotted Swiss. The underskirt was trimmed with ruffles and tulle, over which was worn a short panner looped polonaise. The entire dress was richly finished with lace and a garniture of orange blossoms. Orange blossoms rested upon the exquisitely arranged coiffure, and with a filmy tulle veil falling over all made up the finale of a lovely toilet.

The first bridesmaid, Miss Clara Ford, whiffs dotted Swiss with forget-me-not blue sash and ribbons, corsage bouquet of Marshall Neil roses.

Miss Fannie Hoss, the second bridesmaid, wore a dress of cream nun's veiling, adorned with knots of cardinal ribbon.

The supper was a marvel of culinary skill, and although presented by the father and mother of the bride, was laid in the home prepared for the occupancy of the newly wedded couple, and which adjoins the paternal abode. The table gleamed with silver, and the choice viands rested in the midst of flowers, very beautifully arranged.
